

Hey everybody

Here's something about the stuff we did during the project week 2017.

We had three teachers from England coming to our school:

David; he comes from Faversham, Kent, and has taught for about twenty years.

Elsbeth; she comes from Faversham, too, and has taught for about six years.

Amy; she comes from Birmingham and has taught for about five years.

We were two classes, 4Ea and 4Pc, and we were separated into three groups of thirteen students. Here is what we did during the week:

The first day was the meeting day. After that we learnt many things about the UK and its geography. On the following days, we spoke about festivals, family, extreme sports, buying a house and many other things. We played a lot of games, made role plays and drawings. In the last lesson of each day we worked on our presentations for Friday evening. On Friday evening, we invited our families and friends and made a show with our presentations. There were songs, quizzes, films, games and general presentations. After our show, our "normal" teachers had prepared some snacks for everybody.

On the first day, we got a workbook, a pen and a folder from our teacher. The workbook is separated into different topics. Every teacher had their topic for a day and we did something different in each lesson. We had six lessons per day.

How did we like this week?

Because we made so many role plays, conversations and games our English is much better now. At first it was very unusual to speak English but after a while it was normal for us to talk English every day.
